FAIRVIEW CEMETERY 1910 - 1919

The population of New Albany had grown to approximately 27,000 during these years. This is one reason for the higher number of burials during this time period. But there were, also, other factors that contributed to the deaths that occurred, especially to young adults during this period.

One of the most prevalent causes was consumption or tuberculosis.<sup>1</sup> Although there, had been significant advance in the understanding and treatment of this disease since 1882. It was not until 1943 that they were successful in finding an antibiotic that arrested the disease. Among the persons buried in the cemetery there are 299 that have TB listed as the cause of their death.

<sup>2</sup>About 3:30 Friday afternoon on the 23rd of March 1918, without warning except the presence for some hours of heavy overhanging clouds, a tornado arose west of the city, leaped over "Silver Hills," the fashionable residence district to the west, dipped into the plain and struck in the vicinity of West Seventh Street. It next rushed through the residential district in an easterly direction, ripped out a region of homes three miles long by a half mile to three quarters wide and trailed off into the country, to the east. At 3:35 one third of the city was a mass of wreckage. Five factories were demolished, 500 homes had been crumpled like egg shells, a school house was crushed on a hundred children. There were 200 injured and 40 dead under the debris. The loss was estimated at $1,028,500.00. Nineteen of these victims were buried in Fairview Cemetery.

<sup>3</sup>In 1918 and 1919, conservatively, there was an estimate of 21 million people that died with influenza or the flu in the world. The outbreak probably started in the United States at an army base in the Midwest and then spread to Europe in the lungs of soldiers headed for World War I. It killed 675,000 Americans and more than 20 million around the world. Some estimates go as high as forty million. Dr. Jeffrey Taubenberger states that "This was clearly one of the worst, if not 'the' worst infectious disease outbreak in all of human history and there is still nothing known about the virus that caused this infection."

"The people died very quickly. Their lungs filled up and they died within two to four days of symptoms. One of the problems was an accumulation of massive amounts of fluid in the lungs, and these patients in a sense literally drowned"

One hundred and forty-one people were buried in the cemetery in 1918 and 1919 with the cause listed as pneumonia and influenza.

Then there was World War I. <sup>4</sup>Those that were buried in Fairview were:

Joseph Noble Caraway, the son of Joseph N. and Laura Tresenriter Caraway, died October 31, 1918 in the Base Hospital, Rolling Prairie, Ind., from influenza.

Frederick Fix, the son of Valentine and Catherine Fix. He died of pneumonia September 28, 1918 at Camp Dix, N.J.

Albert Edwin Geyser, the son of Henry and Emma Geyser. He died of pneumonia October 29, 1918, Rolling Prairie, Ind.

Lawrence Raymond Miller, the son of Charles R. and Mattie Zurschmiede Miller. He died of effects of gas and influenza April 11, 1919 in Green Hut Hospital, New York City.
